FingerMotion's Q3 performance reflects a transition toward a more diversified business model. The Telecommunications Products & Services segment remains the Company's foundation, but capital constraints during the quarter reduced our ability to fund the business at historical levels as we moved resources in favour of our Command and Communications segment. The DaGe Platform's revenue also decreased due to the lack of available cash to fund additional promotional activity within the business segment.

"This quarter reflects a disciplined approach to capital management as we pivot toward our highest-growth opportunities," said Martin Shen, CEO of FingerMotion. "We are energized by the momentum in our Command and Communication platform and our recent moves toward strategic acquisitions. By building a leaner, more diversified company, we are ready to scale the innovations we have incubated. Our focus is clear: driving higher revenues and stronger margins through operational efficiency. We are optimistic about the future and remain fully committed to delivering enhanced value to our shareholders."
